From MONDAY November 7th, to MONDAY November 14th, 1748.

FOREIGN AFFAIRS: From the LONDON MAGAZINE for July, 1748.

THO' it is generally ſuppoſed, that the late mobs and Inſurrections in the United Provinces, were privately fomented by perſons of a much higher rank than any that appeared in them, yet it is probable that they were deſigned by thoſe that firſt raiſed the fire, wherefore ſome of the ringleaders have been left to the ſeverity of the law. Two in particular, a man and a woman, who were ſaid to be ring-leaders in the tumults at Amſterdam, were hanged there the 28th ult. N.S. During the time of execution, the populace aſſembled, in a tumultuous manner, and made ſome advances, as if they intended to reſcue the criminals; but all the avenues to the place of execution being guarded by the burghers, or chief citizens, upon the mob's attempting to force one of theſe avenues, the burghers fired upon them, by which between twenty and thirty were wounded, or killed dead on the ſpot; and the confuſion thereby occaſioned was ſo great, that a conſiderable number of the ſpectators, as well as the mob, were puſhed into the canals, ſome of whom were drowned; and ſeveral others were cruſhed or trampled to death: Yet, as this miſchief was done by the burghers, it occaſioned no murmurs; whereas, had it been done by regular troops, it might have occaſioned a general inſurrection, unleſs there had been an army in the town ſufficient to hold the whole people in ſubjection. Some others have been likewiſe executed at the Hague, by which the publick tranquility has been reſtored in the province of Holland; but in Frieſland the confuſion grows daily greater, ſo that it has been reſolved to ſend thither a deputation from the States General, to try to appeaſe the people of that province; and, at the ſame time, ſeveral regiments have been ordered to march that way, which will probably have a greater effect.

On the 19th inſt. O.S. was publiſhed at the Hague, the reſolution of the ſtates of Holland and Weſt-Frieſland, containing the proviſional arrangements concerning the finances, which is to take place till a fix'd and perpetual plan can be form'd to ſupply the defects of the impoſts heretofore farmed. It contains, That all the cities, diſtricts, &c. of the province, ſhall pay to ſtate the ſame ſum that aroſe from the farms in 1747, including the produce of weights, meaſures, duty of entrance, &c. which ſums are calculated at ten millions of florins per annum: That a twelfth part of this ſum ſhall be furniſhed monthly by the magiſtrates, the firſt month to be computed from the 1ſt of this inſtant, and the payment for that month to be made on or before the 1ſt of September; that four per cent. diſcount ſhall be allowed for the money advanced, to make good theſe payments monthly: And, in order to facilitate the ſaid payments, every one is exhorted to calculate what he uſed to pay before the farms were aboliſhed, and to bring in the ſame ſum, in proportion, to the proper officers; with ſeveral regulations concerning the compulſion of payment, and redreſs of thoſe who may be aggrieved. To enforce the whole the conſciences of people are appealed to, the neceſſities of the government are urged, and the moſt pathetick arguments are made uſe of. The laſt appeal, in all theſe matters, is lodged in the prince ſtadtholder.

From Paris we are told, that as the young pretender will be obliged to quit the dominions of France upon concluſion of the treaty of Peace, he had choſen Friburg, one of the Swiſs cantons, for the place of his reſidence, and that the King of France had recommended him to them by a letter under his own hand; but that that canton had refuſed to receive ſuch a dangerous gueſt, tho' coming to them with ſo ſtrong a recommendation. We are adviſed likewiſe from the ſame place, that his moſt chriſtian majeſty had cauſed it to be intimated to the Dutch plenipotentiaries at Aix-la-Chapelle, that if the Ruſſians continued their march, & paſſed Egra, he would immediately ſend orders to demoliſh the fortifications of Maeſtricht and Bergen-op-Zoom: And, in confirmation of this advice, we have an account from Hanover, that, after holding a council, an expreſs had been ſent to prince Repnin, general in chief of the Ruſſian troops, importing, that his Britannick majeſty had thought proper to ſuſpend, proviſionally, the further march of thoſe troops, who are to ſtop in that part of Bohemia bordering upon Franconia and the palatinate of Bavaria.

From Madrid we hear, that, ſince ſigning the preliminaries, the court has thought proper to revoke all the orders formerly given, for prohibiting commerce of any kind with Gibraltar; and that his catholick majeſty, being perfectly ſatisfied with the conduct of M. Wall, major-general of his armies, in the negotiations with which he is charged at London, his majeſty had authoriſed him to ſettle, with the Britiſh miniſters, ſome some articles relating to the freedom of the Engliſh navigation in the Weſt-Indies, as likewiſe certain points relating to the demands of the Engliſh South-Sea company.

An article having been ſome time ſince publiſhed, in one of the foreign Gazettes, as if, among the papers of Dr. Blackwell, letters had been found, from the queen of Denmark, which had ſome relation to the illicit correſpondence for which that phyſician was condemned and executed at Stockholm, his Daniſh majeſty demanded from the king of Sweden, a declaration of the falſity of this aſſertion; which was readily granted, and publiſhed at Stockholm.

Auguſt 13. By letters from Venice it would ſeem, that the republic and the court of Vienna are on the point of coming to a rupture The country people in the diſtrict of Vicenza, 'tis ſaid, have affronted the Empreſs Queen by ſome very indecent ſpeeches, which being come to her ears, ſhe inſiſts upon a ſignal ſatisfaction for the ſame; and as a neceſſary ſtep towards obtaining it, the ſeveral German and Hungarian regiments, that were ordered to return home from Italy, have been countermanded, and double pay promiſed to ſuch of the Croats and Pandours whoſe term of ſerving in the field is expired, in order to engage them to ſtay and occupy the poſts bordering on the Venetian territories: upon which 6000 of them are come to Nalarſi, whither the Auſtrians have already ſent 30 pieces of cannon drawn out of the caſtle of Roveredo; and they aſſure us that the imperial general will aſſemble a conſiderable body of troops towards the diſtrict of Vicenza. On the other hand, all the Venetian cavalry that was quartered at Verona, with the infantry that lay at Breſcia, are advanced into the ſaid diſtrict: and orders iſſued for an augmentation of 20 men per troop and company in the republic's forces: The levies are even begun already in divers places and the ſenate are buying up all ſorts of arms and ammunition in the neighbouring ſtates
